

London Restaurants

project The Ivy Restaurant
location London
client Jeremy King and Chris Corbin
dates 1990
cost £1million

The opportunity to design The Ivy restaurant in London arose from the work with artists. The restaurant is full of their work, much of it commissioned especially for the location. It includes examples by Paolozzi, Blake, Hodgkin, Jones, Phillips and Caulfield. It also provided an opportunity for the architects to devise a lighting scheme housed in complex cast plaster sections and to work in stained glass, brass, oak, and leather. The restaurant has been fully booked since it opened and is highly rated for its ambience.

project Quo Vadis restaurant and bar remodelling
location London
client Acton Cash Ltd
dates 1996
cost £1million

The renovation of Quo Vadis Restaurant included the design and installation of a completely new stained glass window on the street front.
